Hair-raising sentences:

HOUSTON — A justice of the peace is offering to snip some time off juvenile offenders' sentences if they will snip something of their own — their hair.

"The purpose is to give these kids a different mindset or image, try to get them away from the subculture and into the mainstream again," said Tony Polumbo, who serves a Harris County precinct. "About 80 percent accept my offer."

In one case, Polumbo fined a 13-year-old $430 after the boy admitted assaulting a youth as part of a gang initiation rite. The boy agreed to convert the fine to 80 hours of community service and was credited 15 hours in exchange for his wispy ponytail.

"It was worth it," the teenager said after his haircut. He wasn't identified because of his age.

Another teen opted to keep his locks.

"It looks better long this way," said a 16-year-old gang member who was sentenced to 144 community service hours for abusive language and disorderly conduct at school.

Polumbo left his 16-year-old state representative seat to become a justice of the peace three years ago. He prides himself on being unconventional.

"When you deal with youngsters, you can't deal with normal," he said.

British government praised

Democratic Unionist leader Rev. Ian Paisley speaks to the press outside the British Parliament in London Monday after being ordered out of the House of Commons for five days after accusing Northern Ireland Secretary Sir Patrick Mayhew of lying over secret Government contacts with the IRA.

Cabinet supported in IRA secret contacts

The Associated Press

LONDON — The government won praise and encouragement in the House of Commons on Monday as it defended its secret contacts with the Irish Republican Army. Both sides left the door open for more exchanges.

"We shall keep exploring again and again the opportunities for peace," said Sir Patrick Mayhew, the Cabinet official responsible for Northern Ireland.

Gerry Adams, leader of Sinn Fein, said he expected contacts to continue, although he accused the British government of lying and inventing excuses for not negotiating.

"Sinn Fein is committed, and I personally am committed, to trying to bring about peace," Adams said in an interview with Independent Television News.

Mayhew and Prime Minister John Major were embarrassed over the weekend when The Observer published a document exposing the secret contacts. Some Protestant lawmakers from Northern Ireland called for the resignation of Mayhew and even Major, who had strongly denied that any talks were taking place.

Fears have been rising among Protestants in Northern Ireland that a British deal with the IRA could eventually end the province's union with Britain and make them a minority in a reunited Ireland dominated by Roman Catholics.

"I think there is no question of resigning by reason of any efforts that I or the prime minister have made to secure, by proper means, peace in Northern Ireland," Mayhew said, drawing cheers from Conservative Party colleagues.

He released copies of the government's communications with the IRA and its allies. Though these did not resolve all the differences between Mayhew's and Adams' interpretation of events, they did show Britain had insisted

Staff wants HIV class to be requirement

by Courtney Gangemi
administration reporter

Students may be adding a new class to their core education requirements which will educate them about HIV and AIDS, if a University action group has its way.

Western Health College 2000, a group of University staff members, is proposing a required course educating students about AIDS to replace one of the two PEG courses being dropped from the core education requirement at the University.

"We decided that we didn't think the University was doing all that should be done," said Joshua Kaplan, director of health services.

Members of the University administration were invited to partake in a conference during the summer called the Western College Health 2000, he said. The campus group then formed its name from the conference title.

The goal of the group is to educate and bring further education to area universities regarding HIV and the AIDS epidemic, Kaplan said.

Based on the popularity of the course Med Tech 250, which teaches students about AIDS and has been offered at the University since 1988, the idea of implementing a required course has been established, said Clyde Willis, dean of the College of Health and Human Services.

"There is a basic problem on a University level. Students need to be educated and have good information available regarding AIDS," Willis said.

The University needs to do something because there are a large number of students who are at risk for contracting HIV, Kaplan said.

"The WHC 2000 will present the Undergraduate Council an informal proposal trying to ascertain the degree of interest and support for such a concept," Willis said.

Willis said he hopes the faculty will recognize the importance of implementing a required AIDS awareness course.

More than 62,000 Americans have died from the AIDS epidemic from June 1992 to June 1993, Kaplan said.

"More American people have died from AIDS than during the entire Vietnam conflict," he said.

Some students do not practice safe sex and this may be in part due to lack of knowledge, Kaplan said. Low self-esteem and poor communication skills add to the dilemma of AIDS, and the new course will address these problems, he added.

"The presentation might be eye-opening to faculty," said Leigh Chiarelli, professor of higher education. "It's surprising how little is known about the epidemic."

Yemeni keepers release hostage

The Associated Press

SAN'A, Yemen — Kidnapped U.S. diplomat Haynes Mahoney III was released late Monday by Yemeni tribesmen who had held him hostage at their desert stronghold, Interior Minister Yehya al-Mutawakil said.

The minister told The Associated Press that Mahoney was released at 10:30 p.m. (2:30 p.m. EST). He was kidnapped Thursday on his way to a Thanksgiving dinner.

"We have met all the demands of the kidnappers. We pledge to carry them out," the minister said in a telephone interview. He said Mahoney already had been returned to the capital, San'a.

The demands included payment to the tribe for an oil-pumping station used by the U.S. Yemen Hunt Oil Co., back salaries for 150 tribesmen who were discharged from the presidential guard, back salaries for a number of similarly discharged officers and an economic development plan for the tribe's region, said Saleh al-Tam, a provincial official of the Yemen Socialist Party, one of the country's main political groups.

Five gunmen abducted Mahoney, the head of the U.S. Information Service office, Thursday in San'a after he left a reception at the Taj Sheba hotel and headed to a friend's house for Thanksgiving dinner.

Al-Mutawakil and some influential tribal chiefs had negotiated with the tribe holding Mahoney in the desert stronghold at Gahm, 45 miles northeast of San'a.

The Saudi Arabian daily Asharq Al-Awsat reported Monday that authorities had seized "a number of relatives" of the tribal leader, Sheikh Mubarak Saleh al-Sa'idi, in an effort to speed the American's release.

Tribal sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press that the detained relatives included the sheik's son.

Government officials would not confirm or deny the reports.

Yemen is in the throes of a severe political crisis because of differences between President Ali Abdullah Saleh and Vice President Ali Salem al-Beidh over the pace of reforms, including the failure to rein in an unruly security situation in a nation of armed tribesmen.

Mahoney, a widely traveled diplomat in his 40s whose father, retired diplomat Haynes Mahoney II who lives in Boston, had sent his wife and Ambassador Arthur Hughes a stream of handwritten notes saying his kidnappers are treating him well.

Admiral questioned

Navy continues Tailhook assault trial

The Associated Press

NORFOLK, Va. — The Navy's top admiral Monday denied he visited the floor of a Las Vegas hotel when women were harassed during the 1991 Tailhook Convention.

"I was not there," said Adm. Frank B. Kelso II, chief of naval operations. "How sure are you?" prosecutor Lt. Cmdr. Wayne Ritter asked Kelso.

"I am positive," Kelso responded.

Kelso testified in a hearing to determine whether Cmdrs. Thomas Miller and Gregory Tritt will face a court-martial. In all, 83 women say they were assaulted on Saturday night, Sept. 7, 1991, on the third floor of the hotel where the convention was taking place.

Kelso's appearance came two months after Navy Secretary John Dalton tried to fire the admiral, saying he showed lack of leadership in the Tailhook matter. Kelso, 60, kept his job when defense Secretary Les As-

Editorials from across the state

Excerpts of recent Ohio editorials of national and statewide interest:

The Columbus Dispatch, Nov. 29:

Some people --convicted felons, fugitives, minors, those adjudicated mentally incompetent, drug and alcohol addicts and illegal aliens-- should not be able to buy a gun legally.

Basically, that is what the Brady bill, finally passed by Congress last week, is all about. Think about it. Waiting five days for something isn't a burden for any reasonable person.

Yet the gun lobby for years has opposed a waiting period for gun purchases.

The Brady bill is far from a panacea, but it is an appropriate step in addressing situations where anger rages, such as in domestic violence. And the law will not compromise the right of any law-abiding citizens to own a gun.

The Bradys and their many supporters deserve a hand for their persistence in finally beating back the gun lobby, whose voice is loud, but whose arguments in this instance are weak.

Akron Beacon Journal, Nov. 28:

Three cheers for Robert Zemsky, an education expert from the University of Pennsylvania, who was in the spotlight last week at a national conference. He was right on target in his comments about restructuring schools.

Zemsky's point was that schools need to find ways to save money on operations and at the same time improve learning through computers and high-tech equipment.

Innovation in the schools will require nothing less than creative thinking. There is a school district in Pennsylvania, for example, that set up a science lab in a van.

There are too few examples of this kind of restructuring. Schools need to improve the way they do business and local superintendents need to join together in the effort.

The (Toledo) Blade, Nov. 26: Morton Halperin is becoming a victim because he has been a critic of much of what government has done wrong in recent times. But that is no reason to deny him a job in the Pentagon.

In effect, Halperin has become a lightning rod for the wrath of conservative lawmakers who think he is not qualified to serve as assistant secretary of defense for democracy and peacekeeping.

His most vocal critics seem willing to overlook the fact that the nominee is well schooled in government.

No attack has been launched against him on the basis of competence; he's qualified to do the job for which he has been nominated.

Game end creates uncertainties

The demise of the half-century cat and mouse game between the United States and the former Soviet Union certainly brings a big sigh of relief for most countries. However, the end of this game brings a lot of uncertainties and suspicion. At this point of global relations, there is more reason for nations to work collectively to achieve peace and avoid the possibility of subjecting the world to the kind of uncertainties that was previously the case.

Suffice it to say, the cold world period actually heightened the possibility of a nuclear "accident" between the United States and the Soviet Union. This "accident" would no doubt have had more severe global consequences than most people would like to admit.

The notion that communism "died" with the disunion of the former Soviet Union would be the same thing as arguing that the Supreme Court ruling of separate but equal as being unconstitutional is no longer alive and well in Mississippi.

In effect, the contention of this notion would be shying away from the reality of the dangers of global uncertainties. They are completely contained because the countries that practice communism will strive and do what is possible to preserve the communist system.

The sustainability of the communist system will require a massive concentration of economic resources. This quest to obtain economic means to sustain the system, even the absence of war (hot or cold), breeds suspicion and heightens the tension which could in fact lead to threat of the use of nuclear weapons where they are present.

Let's take China for example. Much of the emphasis of the cold war has primarily been paid on the United States and the former Soviet Union. We seem to have forgotten that China also possesses nuclear weapons and has the same, if not better, chance of launching them if they "determine" it necessary.

Recently China tested their own nuclear weapons and then quickly said that they have no intention of firing them. You're right. No rational-thinking person will test something if they have no intention of using it. When you are tested for your driver's license, the intent is for you to obtain it, right? You do not test for the sake or the fun of testing.

Is China's testing of its nuclear weapons the beginning of another round of global cold war between the United States and China? I am concerned by the mere presence of nuclear weapons. They are used for one purpose only. That purpose is human extinction. The world simply can not afford another breath taking event and zealous fingers poised at the nuclear button.

There is no guarantee that China will not take this opportunity of disintegration of the bipolar system theory between the United States and the former Soviet Union to further expand its military and nuclear capabilities.

Even the Soviet communist surrogates who now parade themselves as what the United States and the other "influenced" countries want to hear -- democratic states -- would chip in their own share of the arms race and hence increase the suspicion level. Enough on China.

All through this half-century war of nerves, the United States and the former Soviet Union engaged in the incomparable arming of most of the countries around the world.

The reasons for this included the bid to protect their spheres of influence and the protection of their political ideologies. The countries most hurt from this arms race were of course African nations.

Today there are political disturbances as well as economic hardships in some of these countries. The African countries that depended so much on these two nations for arms shipments (Angola, Liberia and Somalia) are now having difficulty believing that the war of nerves between these countries have indeed ended.

I am inclined to wait this out because Boris Yeltsin has not really revealed himself to the world. He may be fooling us all about his method of democratic ideology.

Now the question is what must be done to curtail the spread of further regional conflicts which is actually one of the threats that Secretary Aspin mentioned as being among the new list of global threats? The impending threat of the resumption of the cold war under a new name but similar actors, must not be allowed to flourish. Well, how can this be done, you ask? This can be achieved through the non-provision of support for a specific group or faction in any regional fighting.

When you provide sectional support for a group, as was the case in the mid-1980's in the Iran-Contra rebels fight against the Sandinistas, you are actually expanding the problem which then increases the dangers to global stability and peace.

There are many countries who are unsure of their political route. As has been the case, the communist China believes that their own system offers more and makes more sense and that the State knows what is best for the citizens, and the capitalist United States poses their system gives more choices for people to determine their own destiny.

Whatever side anybody chooses to accept, the fact is that there is an impending explosion of a second round of the cat and mouse game. This time we may never know if it will be successfully resolved or not as was between the United States and the former Soviet Union, but not, with huge costs.

The countries who are still charting their political course will unnecessarily be dragged into any war, unwillingly I must contend. The scramble for influence, or should I say colonies, will become the order of call by China and the United States.

Do we want a global economic and political development or do we want to see a global nuclear proliferation by some suspicious nations?

The "developing and independent nations" will become the newest dumping grounds, if they are already not, of the United States and China's military leftovers.

You can offer somebody bread but if you do not constantly remind that person that you will not always be able to provide them with bread all the time, then you better be ready to face the consequences when that person gets angry.

This will be the scenario that will overcome some of these countries. I would rather see a collective economic development than a nuclear development. I want my children to grow up in an environment that is free of weapons that will end their lives before they even begin.

Army officer touts University R.O.T.C.

The BG News:

In response to the article November 19, titled "Age affects ROTC decision," I found the article to be good from the human interest standpoint, but more needed to be said about Army R.O.T.C., which was my primary reason for being interviewed for the article.

In the mid 70's as the result of problems resulting from the Viet Nam War, the Army had to make a number of necessary changes to improve the service. As the post Viet Nam army was reduced, the standards for future officers and enlisted personnel were raised, resulting in a much higher quality of personnel. This higher standard is clearly evident with the officers and enlisted personnel of Army R.O.T.C. today.

Secondly, there is no comparison between the officers and enlisted personnel of 1971 to 1993. The awesome professionalism that LTC. Hover and his subordinate officers exhibit is something I did not see at Fort Knox in 1971, even though I observed a number of officers at that time. The quality of these officers is what I have dreamed about being for the past 22 years.

Of the ten enlisted personnel with the rank of sergeant and higher that I observed in my basic training company in 1971, only two can compare to the quality of the enlisted personnel that are in Army R.O.T.C. at the University today. Those two sergeants in 1971 were "Old Army" and were the best in the army at that time.

Then there are the cadets. These young men and women are in a class of their own. They are dedicated, determined, and they know what their objective is in life, and they are going for it.

Men like Nelson Craft, Daniel Erker, Tim Bogner, Charles Smith, and Bryan Pabin, to name a few have been very impressive.

Women like Terri Andreoni, Colleen Geib, and Kim Donovan, have totally changed my once chauvinistic attitude that women were not capable of leading or keeping up with the men, as they have without question proven themselves.

Lastly, in observing the quality of the cadets in Army R.O.T.C. it is clearly evident that this quality is a true reflection of the quality of officers and enlisted personnel at the University who have made this University one of the top R.O.T.C. in the nation.

Jim Crow laws topic of forum

by Ginger Phillips
human diversity reporter

"Colored need not apply," "For whites only," "Negroes and Freight," -- signs like these may have surprised anybody who walked by, or into, the Bowl-n-Greenery Thursday night.

The signs were put up by the Racism Reduction Center, who hosted Campus Expressions with the topic, "Jim Crow: Friend or Foe?" The discussion included "separate but equal" policies which are still prevalent in society, inter-racial relationships and institutional racism.

"People still believed in Jim Crow laws after they were abolished," Rick Nash said.

Nash, adviser of the Racism Reduction Center, said the discussion was meant to supplement the everyday learning process by allowing students to teach and learn from each other.

"We're here to digress from that normal education that you get everyday," he said. "Our main objective is to come up with some solutions so we can take some action.

Nash said each individual is significant in the fight against racism.

"We all know everyone in here has a consciousness about racism," he said. "Take that position and move from this room and teach others."

Nash asked the audience to ask themselves the question, "Why would I, being white, want to do something about racism?"

One participant answered by saying he is human before he is a Caucasian, and human feelings are more important than appearance.

Participants concluded the evening by coming up with ways the individual can help end racism.

□ Explain to your family how racism prevents many from being happy.

□ Work to help create a multicultural voice through a monthly publication funded by the University.

□ Attend one of President Paul Olscamp's open forums to explain and question him on the topic of racism.

Dennerll receives FBI appointment

by Courtney Gangemi
administration reporter

The University director of public safety has been appointed the 1994 state president of the Ohio chapter of the Federal Bureau of Investigation's Academy Associates.

Roger Dennerll joined the University community four years ago. He graduated from the 133rd Session in 1983 from the academy.

Dennerll

He has served as spokesperson for that session which represented 250 law enforcement executives from around the world and now is ready to move on to his new position, he said.

"The appointment is impressive," Dennerll said. "It'll give not only myself, but the local police division, an opportunity to network."

More than 25,000 officers have graduated from the FBI National Academy since it began in 1935. The curriculum is designed to meet the needs of contemporary law enforcement in such disciplines as management, law, forensic and behavioral sciences and education and communication arts.

The immediate past state president, Police Chief James Odell of Kettering, Ohio, said he believes Dennerll will do well in his new job.

"The position is quite extensive. There is a considerable amount of traveling involved," Odell said.

The office position lasts for one year and an individual must move through a seven-year sequence of chairs in moving toward the presidency seat, Odell said.

"Dennerll will be responsible for direction and leadership of the FBINA," Odell said. "His influence will be felt on the chapter."

Dennerll has been active in FBINA since graduation and has been an officer for the executive board for the past eight years. He is now moving into the state board and has been nationally endorsed by the Ohio chapter for the position of Section IV representative.

The region includes Ohio, 12 northeastern states, eastern Canada and Europe.

"The appointment will allow other avenues to become available locally, such as Cultural Diversity workshops, and other problems regarding the city and University, too," Dennerll said.

Dennerll has the talent, skills and leadership that will allow him to be "man of the year in 1994," Odell said.

throughout that the IRA had to call off violence before any negotiations.

Contrary to its public demands for a permanent cease-fire, the government apparently was willing in May to accept a two-week halt in the IRA campaign as the price for talking.

Martin McGuinness, the deputy leader of Sinn Fein, accused the British of inventing a message supposedly passed to the British in February, saying the IRA had concluded "the conflict is over."

Kevin McNamara, Northern Ireland spokesman for the opposition Labor Party, said he hoped the government's "recent mishandling of these matters" would not deter ministers "from believing that risk-taking is essential if progress is to be achieved."

David Alton of the small Liberal Democratic Party hailed the government for its courage.

Criticism of Mayhew came only from Protestant lawmakers from Northern Ireland. The Rev.

Ian Paisley, leader of the hard-line Democratic Unionist Party, was ejected from the Commons after calling Mayhew a liar, violating a rule against such accusations.

"I just put it in plain Ulster language that he was lying. I would rather be outside as a true man than inside the House with Paddy Mayhew the liar," Paisley told reporters.

Mayhew said the government sent a message to the IRA on Nov. 2 that it was ready to start negotiations as early as mid-January if there was a cease-fire.

"It is for the IRA and their supporters to explain why they have failed to deliver the promised ending of violence," he said.

The IRA's supporters had a different story: that Britain got cold feet after the IRA had agreed to a two-week cease-fire in May in response to a British offer of intensive talks.

The fears of Northern Ireland's Protestants that Britain might reach a deal with the IRA has fueled violence. Protestant "loyalists" have out-killed the IRA by 43 to 32 this year.

Olscamp, Ash speak to USG

by Larissa Hritsko
student government reporter

Student concerns for the improvement of academics, the University and safety were addressed at the Undergraduate Student Government meeting with the University President and Bowling Green Police Chief at Monday night's meeting.

University President Paul Olscamp spoke to the general assembly about the close relationship between teaching and researching among University faculty.

"Researching and teaching are intimately related. It is knowledge that advances us," Olscamp said.

Olscamp also addressed the changing role of the University and the emphasis placed on research for advancing learning and information to the students.

"I don't accept the dichotomy of teaching versus researching. Teaching is improved through research," he said. "Through my own experience I have found that if I do additional research I can refer students to original sources and secondary sources to enhance their learning."

Other questions brought to Olscamp included his stance on the student control of the general fee.

"This week, I am meeting with President Jackson. I have no fixed attitude about this, but I encourage [USG to sponsor] a survey to the student body in order to determine the consensus through a verifiable, objective process," he said. "It would not be sufficient to change the process unless the majority of students favored it."

Police Chief Galen Ash addressed the assembly about the police division's role in increasing safety and solving crimes.

The division will increase its number of police officers and will add two police officers on bicycles to increase safety, Ash said. Recently, Bowling Green police became nationally accredited, which makes them the only department in Northwest Ohio with this accomplishment, according to Ash.

Ash also said the recent rapes will continue to be investigated through possible leads.

"The main reason why the Bowling Green City Police spoke to the assembly was the recent publicity generated by the victims of the rapes," said Chad Luckner, USG vice president. "When the victims speak out, you tend to wonder why the enforcers or protectors don't, so this was the chance for them to tell us what they are doing, especially to increase the safety of the students."

Ritter noted that witnesses placed Kelso on the third floor patio deck the night of Sept. 7.

"I say they are mistaken," Kelso said.

Kelso told military judge Capt. William T. Vest, Jr. that he at-

Attorneys for Miller and Tritt say charges against their clients should be dismissed because the admiral overseeing the cases was appointed by Kelso, who they claim has a personal stake in the prosecutions because of the dispute over where he was.

Renters can end housing dilemmas Fired workers sue soup makers

by Tara Stubbs
general assignment

Ah, apartment life. Goodbye parents, sneaking in after 3 a.m., and cleaning your room.

Hello possible overcrowding, overcharging and a broken furnace.

If renting a place has become a headache -- and you think you're being treated unfairly by landlords or roommates -- government agencies can offer help.

The city, the county health department and a fair housing investigation agency are available to help renters with their problems.

The city investigates overcrowding, the health department examines housing for unsafe conditions and the Toledo Fair Housing Authority looks into complaints of housing discrimination.

People who believe they have been denied housing unfairly can contact the fair housing authority, which is contracted by the city to investigate such complaints.

City Housing Director Carolyn Lineback said fair housing means having the opportunity to buy or rent a house or apartment regardless of race, color, religion, national origin, disability, sex or familial status, according to federal law.

investigator Nellie Edwards said once a problem is referred to their office, they interview the complainant and conduct an investigation.

Edwards said if discrimination is proven, the complainant can file an action with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, notify the U.S. Civil Rights Commission or take the case to a federal or state court.

"The civil rights commission only takes complaints which fall under the Title 8 Civil Rights Act which bans discrimination," Edwards said.

Complaints that too many people are living in one dwelling are handled by city Code Enforcement Officer Robert Shetzer.

Most occupancy complaints are about too many students living in a house.

For example, only three unrelated people can live in a house zoned R2 -- single family residential.

Shetzer said when he gets a complaint it most generally comes from a nearby neighbor. He said he conducts most of his investigations by himself.

"The majority of the houses investigated are done on my own," Shetzer said.

Shetzer said most of the occupancy violations are committed by residents who are trying to cut down on rent.

If an investigation proves the residents are in violation, the landlord is notified of the problem. The landlord could order all occupants of the house to leave, even evicting the residents whose names appear on the lease.

If the violation is committed by the landlord, the landlord is usually given 30 days to remove the extra occupants. Schetzer said if it is close to the end of the semester, students are usually allowed to stay until the next semester.

"Students should check with [the city planning department] if they have a question -- anything from occupancy to health problems," Shetzer said.

Unsafe living conditions and other health complaints are handled by the Wood County Health Department.

Ted Heartwell, the department's registered sanitarian, said the kinds of complaints he generally receives are problems with bugs, heat shortages, holes in the walls, leaking plumbing and low water pressure.

Heartwell said once the health department receives a complaint, it does an investigation to see if it is a legitimate complaint. He said when the problem is borderline as far as the law is concerned, the department still seeks out the landlord and suggests the problem be remedied.

If the landlord is breaking the law, he or she is contacted by letter or in person and ordered to fix the problem.

Heartwell said the landlord generally is given five to 21 days to correct the problem. If the problem is not corrected, the health department takes the landlord to court.

"I don't think in the last two-and-a-half years I have had to go to court," Heartwell said.

He said he has not received many complaints since September.

If students believe they have had too much money deducted from their security deposit, they can seek help from Student Legal Services or take the case to small claims court themselves.

Bowling Green Municipal Court Deputy Clerk Mary Sue Dohoney said before taking the problem to small claims court, a tenant needs to have filed a complaint with the landlord, notified the landlord they plan to take them to court, given the landlord a written copy of their new address and have been out of the old apartment for one month.

A court date is then set for a hearing. The landlord is required to bring a list of billing charges with him and must be able to explain the charges.

"The landlord has to justify money taken out of the deposit," Dohoney said.

If the court determines an error has been made, the resident can receive "double damage." For instance, if $50 too much was taken from the deposit, the tenant can receive $100.

sue soup makers

The Associated Press

TOLEDO -- Twelve employees fired for alleged drug and alcohol abuse at the Campbell Soup Co. plant in Napoleon have filed federal lawsuits against the company.

The lawsuits, filed Friday, allege that company representatives and outside investigators coerced employees into false confessions on tape.

Campbell's Napoleon plant suspended 67 workers in December following a company investigation. After hearings, 60 people were fired.

Also listed as a defendant was Krout & Schneider, Inc., a California investigation company that videotaped some Campbell employees.

The actions of Campbell and Krout & Schneider were "unreasonable, outrageous, and would shock the conscience of the average citizen," said the suit, filed in U.S. District Court.

Kevin Lowery, a Campbell spokesman, declined to comment on the suit because the Camden, N.J., soup maker had not reviewed the suits.

Lowery said the investigation "was done thoroughly, but it was also done very, very fairly."

Lowery said the investigation began when other workers complained about alcohol and drug abuse at the plant.

"Those workers were concerned about their safety or they knew that type of activity was illegal and against company policy," he said.

Astronauts to repair Hubble

The Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. -- It's one of the most important missions in space shuttle history and by far the most complex. Repairing the Hubble Space Telescope -- a colossal job -- has NASA fretting over two little words.

What if?

What if space shuttle Endeavor can't rendezvous with the nearsighted Hubble? What if the shuttle robot arm breaks and can't grab the $1.6 billion telescope? What if the telescope's solar wings don't fold up? What if the telescope is in worse shape than expected? What if one of the seven astronauts gets sick? What if the shuttle toilet breaks and forces an early return?

Put it all together and you've got a nightmare of astronomical proportions.

Nightmares -- and imagination -- were running rampant Monday at Kennedy Space Center as NASA counted down toward the scheduled 4:57 a.m. EST Wednesday launch of Endeavor.

During the 11-day flight, astronauts are to take a record five spacewalks to try to fix Hubble's problems as well as NASA's image, battered repeatedly over the past several years. If necessary, the crew could conduct seven spacewalks to install 11 new telescope parts and yet another spacewalk to deal with a shuttle emergency.

Hubble program manager Ken Ledbetter said his biggest fear is that "something might happen that would preclude us from even trying to fix the telescope."

"I think we can handle anything that will happen once we're out in the bay and start working [on Hubble]. But if something were to happen before, a problem with the shuttle, a problem with the crew, an attack of appendicitis or whatever, that would be tragic."

NASA's associate director of flight projects for Hubble, Joe Rothenberg, shares those fears.

If for some reason the astronauts can't capture the bus-size telescope some 360 miles above Earth and anchor it in Endeavor's cargo bay, "we don't even have a chance to get up to bat," Rothenberg said.

Hubble scientist Edward Weiler is most afraid of the unknown: The project's record has shown "it's the things you didn't prepare for that will get you."

Like so many others at NASA, Weiler has been living with stress ever since the Hubble was found to have an improperly polished mirror that blurred its vision of extremely remote objects in the universe. That discovery came two months after the 1990 launch.

Besides a mirror that's too flat along the edge, Hubble's electricity-generating solar panels flap, one of the panel drive electronics is out, three of six gyroscopes are broken, both magnetometers have glitches, several computer memory boards have failed and an ultraviolet-detector has intermittent power trouble.

Plane crash claims life

The Associated Press

EVANS CITY, Pa. -- A multimillionaire telephone and cable television executive was killed when the plane he was flying crashed into a home north of Pittsburgh, a member of the victim's family said Monday.

Residents of the home escaped the Sunday afternoon crash without injury.

Jud L. Sedwick, 80, chairman of the Armstrong Group of Companies, was the pilot, said a man who answered the phone at Sedwick's house and identified himself only as Sedwick's son.

The Armstrong Group said Sedwick, of West Kittanning, was killed in a plane crash, but declined to comment further.

Coroner William Young declined to confirm the pilot's identity. An associate said dental records would likely be needed to make a positive identification.

Sedwick had built a $315 million fortune over five decades and had business interests in seven states.

The Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board were investigating the crash, which occurred in blowing snow in Butler County, 20 miles north of Pittsburgh. State police said they could not immediately attribute the crash to the weather.

The six-seat Piper craft gave off a sputtering noise before crashing and erupting into a ball of flames, witnesses said.

Firefighter Tim Schoeffel said the flames were so heavy he could not see any wreckage among what was left of the house.

"We didn't know if the plane was still in the house or in the woods," the firefighter said.

The wreckage burned for hours, hindering efforts to extricate the body. Authorities also had difficulty finding pieces of the plane bearing identifying numbers or other marks.

The plane crashed into a two-story farmhouse owned by George and Patricia Wright, who fled with their son, Dave. Witnesses said the Wrights were preparing for a birthday party for their granddaughter when the plane clipped the second story. The family's dog was killed.

Student trustees may get full status

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS -- A state legislator has proposed a bill that would give full trustee status, including voting power, to student members of public university boards of trustees.

Rep. Mike Stinziano, D-Columbus, also sponsored legislation in 1988 which allowed students to be placed on trustee boards. Stinziano represents an area that includes Ohio State University's main campus.

Each state-assisted university has two student trustees. They are prohibited from voting on issues brought to trustee boards and may be excluded from closed-door meetings of the boards.

The Ohio Student Association, a nonprofit group representing students of Ohio's 13 public universities, has pushed for the legislation for years.

Kevorkian wanted by police

Arrest warrant issued for "suicide doctor" on new charge

The Associated Press

ROYAL OAK, Mich. -- A judge issued an arrest warrant Monday for Dr. Jack Kevorkian on a new charge of assisting a suicide. Kevorkian was declared a fugitive after failing to surrender when authorities said he had promised to.

The judge signed the warrant charging Kevorkian for last month's suicide of 72-year-old Merian Frederick, said Larry Kozma of the Oakland County Prosecutor's Office.

Earlier Monday, Prosecutor Richard Thompson said Kevorkian's attorney Michael Schwartz had told him the retired pathologist would surrender later in the day.

"Mr. Schwartz has not kept his word," Kozma said. He said police were searching for Kevorkian.

Frederick, who had amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, or Lou Gehrig's disease, died Oct. 22 by inhaling carbon monoxide in an apartment next to the one in which Kevorkian lives in Royal Oak.

Thompson said last week's death of Dr. Khalili in the same apartment remains under investigation.

Kevorkian already faces as-

"This whole thing is ridiculous. Sure, what do we do in this society? Looking to arrest people who exercise compassion, and people who are out there engaged in all kinds of criminal activity are allowed to go free."

Michael Schwartz, Dr. Kevorkian's attorney

sisted-suicide charges in two deaths in neighboring Wayne County. The crime carries up to four years in prison and a $2,000 fine on conviction.

Schwartz denied he had broken any promise to prosecutors and said Kevorkian would surrender at 9 a.m. Tuesday.

"He's not going to flee," Schwartz said.

Kevorkian, 65, has threatened a hunger strike if jailed. He refused solid food, but accepted juice, water and vitamins, during a three-day stay earlier this month in the Wayne County Jail.

The new warrant was issued less than a day after police raided Kevorkian's apartment.

Kevorkian said officers "burst in" Sunday night as his sister and two friends arrived to visit. Schwartz said the apartment was subjected to a search without a warrant.

U.S. District Judge Gerald Rosen denied Schwartz's request that he take action against Thompson and police for harassment.

Police said they had received a tip that a suicide was to take place in the apartment and waited until a search warrant arrived before entering.

"This whole thing is ridiculous," Schwartz said. "Sure, what do we do in this society? Looking to arrest people who exercise compassion, and people who are out there engaged in all kinds of criminal activity are allowed to go free."

Thompson said investigators probing Frederick's death faced a "conspiracy of silence." He said neither Kevorkian nor friends or relatives of Frederick would answer police questions.

He said his investigators had built a strong case with evidence including the canister that held the carbon monoxide that killed Frederick.

"I believe in free choice," Thompson said.

BG to play in NIVC

by Mike Kazimore
sports writer

Although the Bowling Green volleyball team fell short of its ultimate goal this season -- to win the MAC regular season title and ensuing post season tournament -- the Falcons accomplished much more than most had thought possible.

BG, picked to finish seventh in the coaches' preseason poll, finished second, behind Ball State, in the MAC regular season race. The Falcons then took their act on the road over the weekend to try and win the conference's post season tournament and qualify for the NCAA Tournament.

Once again the Falcons found themselves playing second fiddle to a senior-laden Ball State squad.

BG, the second seed in the tournament, began the weekend by downing the Chippewas of Central Michigan and advancing to the finals. The Falcons, beating Central for the second time in three matches this year, handed Central a four game 15-7, 15-10, 2-15 and 15-7 decision.

After cruising through the first two games the Falcons were blown out in the third game 2-15.

"I felt like we had a little letdown in that third game," BG head coach Denise Van De Walle said. "After you win the first two games in an easy fashion you have a tendency to coast through that third game and that's what happened to us."

Despite the lopsided defeat in that third game Van De Walle said that she was confident that her team could come back and pull out a victory in the next game.

"Whenever a team beats another team by such a big margin -- provided that team is not a superior opponent -- they usually come back flat in the next game," Van De Walle said.

The spikers, behind the outstanding play of Carlyn Esslinger who had 21 kills for a .311 attacking percentage, bounced back from their poor showing in the previous game and posted a 15-7 win to pull out the match.

The victory landed the Falcons into the tournament finals where they were pitted against the Cardinals of Ball State -- a team that had cruised through the MAC regular season without a defeat.

"Going into the Ball State game I told the players that there was no pressure on us, that it was all on them," Van De Walle said. "After all, we weren't even supposed to make it to the tournament." Early on BSU showed they were the dominant team in the league as it jumped out to a two game lead and then fought off the Falcons for a tough 15-8, 15-12, 12-15 and 15-5 four-game victory.

After dropping the first two games the young Falcons battled back to pull out a game three win, however BG was unable to carry that momentum over to the next game.

"We played great in that third game, but we just couldn't sustain that level of play for the whole night," Van De Walle said. "Overall, I think that our inexperience really showed against Ball State, especially when the games got tight."

With their second place finish in the MAC tournament the Falcons earned their second straight appearance in the National Invitational Volleyball Championship. Last year Van De Walle led her squad to an impressive second-place finish in this event.

Defensive switch grounds Jackets

by Aaron Dorksen
sports editor

If plan A fails go to plan B. Bowling Green head coach Jim Larranaga knew Monday night's NAIA opponent Defiance College could shoot from behind the three-point arc.

But he also wanted his team to begin working on the things they will need down the stretch to be successful in the Mid-American Conference -- which includes a trapping press and zone defense.

The result was a closer game than anyone but Larranaga might have suspected Monday night as Defiance (1-4) stayed close until late in the game when Bowling Green (1-0) made a defensive switch to run away from the Yellow Jackets 90-71.

"The game actually went kind of how I thought it might," Larranaga said. "We had two plans coming in, plan A was to pressure them, to play up tempo and get some quick hoops. It worked early when we got out of a 17-5 lead."

"They made some big shots to stay in the game until we went to our second plan we knew we might need, playing a man-to-man defense which limited their outside shooting."

Defiance shot 14-30 from three-point range for the game, compared to 5-20 for BG. The Yellow Jackets only attempted 24 two-point shots, hitting on 10.

Bowling Green connected on 29-of-59 from the field and out-rebounded Defiance 38-25.

Bowling Green's James Cerisier beats Defiance's Jason Badik to a loose ball during the Falcons 90-71 season opening win Monday night.

Despite being down by 12 at the half, Defiance got hot from the outside, cutting the Falcons lead to 69-62 with 7:49 remaining in the game.

At this point Larranaga had enough, taking BG out of its zone defense and employing a tight-man-to-man to cool off Defiance's perimeter players.

Freshman point guard Antonio Daniels started a 19-9 BG run with 6:57 left when he stole the ball from Defiance's Kent Seeman at half-court and finished the play at the other end with a crowd-pleasing, one-handed slam dunk.

"We went home with five minutes left in the game," Defiance coach Marv Hohenberger said. "I think maybe they just thought they played close enough and let up."

Daniels finished with 12 points on the night. BG saw its two Shanes, Komives and Kline Ruminski, lead the team with 14 points each. Komives also carried the rebounding load for BG, leading the team with 9. Kline-Ruminski was limited to just 20 minutes because of foul trouble.

Icers finish third in tourney

by Brian Mart
sports writer

The Bowling Green hockey team split its two games last weekend in the Dexter Classic, but the win was not the one that the team had hoped for.

The team travelled to Orono, Maine over Thanksgiving in hopes of beating the eleventh ranked Rensselaer (RPI) Engineers in order to earn a matchup with the top ranked Maine Black Bears.

However, the Falcons couldn't get past the Engineers, losing 5-4, and the only thing they had to be thankful for was a consolation contest with a struggling Illinois at Chicago squad. BG beat fellow Central Collegiate Hockey Association member UIC on Saturday 4-2.

RPI went on to defeat Maine 5-4 to win the tournament championship.

"Although these games are out of conference, they still will be important because they will be looked at when the NCAA tournament teams are selected," Falcon coach Jerry York said.

As they have become prone to do in recent weeks, the Falcons found themselves in an early hole against RPI. The Engineers burned BG goaltender Bob Petrie for four first period goals and led 4-1 at the end of the period.

The first period is the best time to get to Petrie. He has allowed 14 first period goals this year, but has only surrendered 10 in the second and third periods combined.

As they have also become prone to do in recent weeks, the Falcons mounted a comeback. Third period power play goals by Mike Johnson and Todd Reirden brought the Falcons to within a goal, but they couldn't manage to push another goal past RPI netminder Neil Little, who made 41 saves in the contest. For the game, BG outshot RPI 45-28.

"I think it was a situation where RPI rode a real hot goaltender to a championship," York said. "He [Little] faced 43 or 44 shots in each game, that's why he was the MVP."

Reirden had two points in the game, as did Kelly Perrault. Perrault's second period tally was his first as a Falcon. "I was pleased our team generated so much offense. We created good quality opportunities," York said. BG got stellar offensive performances from Jason Clark and Brian Holzinger and sharp goaltending from Will Clarke in defeating CCHA cellar dweller UIC in the consolation game.

Clark had a hand in all four Falcon goals against UIC, getting 2 goals and 2 assists. Holzinger added a goal and an assist for the brown and orange.

Women's hoops to face Xavier in home opener

by Mark Leonard DeChant
assistant sports editor

Don't expect tonight's women's basketball game to have a David versus Goliath feel to it.

Sure, the Falcons are the defending Mid-American Conference champions, and are returning 10 letterwinners from the team that won 25 games last year.

And sure, BG is opening its regular season against Xavier, a school that plays in the Mid-Continent Conference.

While the MCC is not as well-known a league as the Big Ten or even the MAC, it should be noted that the Lady Musketeers represent the MCC's best.

Xavier returns eight letterwinners -- including three starters -- from a squad that last year went 21-9 overall, and finished second in the MCC regular season.

Xavier won its conference tournament, earning a berth in the NCAA tourney. The Musketeers, similar to Bowling Green, lost their first-round matchup in the NCAAs.

"They play in a small conference," BG assistant coach Ellen McGrew said. "But they're a high-quality team."

"They've got some pretty good players coming back, who have some experience."

The Musketeers boast one of the best guards in the region in 6-foot senior Carol Madsen. Madsen averaged 19 points and 7 rebounds per game last year, and can operate at both point guard and shooting guard positions.

McGrew says Madsen uses her height to shoot over smaller defenders. Madsen has already scored over 1,000 career points, and was named the Most Valuable Player of the MCC tournament.

Other key players for Xavier include junior forward Lynn Bihn, who scored 17 points per game in 1992-93, and 6-foot-3 senior center Janet Haneberg.

Bihn, who earned first-team All-MCC honors last season, is recovering from a knee injury but should see the floor extensively tonight.

"We will probably run our usual up-tempo defensive game," McGrew said. "We're happy to finally play a game. It will be important to start off the year with a win."

Tip-off is scheduled for 7:30.

Blackney to stay

by Aaron Dorksen
sports editor

Bowling Green football coach Gary Blackney had more on his mind than relaxing during the Thanksgiving holiday and enjoying some turkey.

Blackney announced Monday he has withdrawn his name from consideration for the head coaching position at Duke University.

The two-time Mid-American Conference coach of the Year was contacted by the Atlantic Coast Conference school after Blue Devils coach Barry Wilson announced he would resign effective at the end of the season.

Duke ended its season last week with a 38-24 loss to North Carolina.

Blackney, having just completed his third season at BG, interviewed for the position last week. After careful consideration over the weekend, Blackney said he decided to stay at Bowling Green where there is still a lot for the team to accomplish.

The Falcon football team was in an unfamiliar position this season under Blackney, finishing in third place in the MAC with a 5-1-2 MAC record, and 6-3-2 overall.

BG's other featured freshman, forward Jay Larranaga added 12, while forward Floyd Miller chipped in 11.

"I don't think our defense was all that bad on their three-point shots," Larranaga said. "We don't see many teams that will put the ball up that many times from three-point range during the season."

"Once we went to more natural perimeter matchups, that is really where we had the game won."

Defiance forward Jason Badik led all scorers, lighting BG up for 26 points, including 6-9 three-point shooting. Seeman and guard Jeff Sever were the only other players in double figures for Defiance, scoring 11 and 10 points respectively.

The Falcons will host Findlay College Wednesday.

Nobody knows standardized tests like we do. Kaplan employs the largest research staff in the test prep business--to study, observe, track, dissect, simulate and explain standardized tests. Then we teach you what we know.

That's what we do. That's all we do. And we've been doing it successfully for over 50 years.

Successful test-takers like the test-makers.
